ABSTRACT

The objective of this project is to develop an interactive web application that allows users to explore and submit ratings and reviews for restaurants across various cities. Utilizing HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, the platform aims to create a user-friendly interface where visitors can search for restaurants, view detailed ratings and reviews, and contribute their own feedback. The project emphasizes dynamic content rendering, user engagement, and responsive design, ensuring an optimal experience across devices.

At the heart of the application lies a user-friendly interface that allows visitors to search for restaurants based on a variety of criteria, such as location, cuisine type, price range, and user ratings. In addition to simply browsing restaurant listings, users will be able to view detailed profiles for each establishment, including aggregated ratings, user-submitted reviews, menus, and even photos. This rich, dynamic content will be generated and displayed in real time, ensuring that users always see the latest information available.

TECHNICAL STACK

HTML (Hyper Text Markup Language) is the standard language used to create and structure content on the web. It forms the backbone of web development, defining the structure and layout of web pages. HTML uses a system of tags and attributes to organize content into elements such as headings, paragraphs, images, links, lists, and more. Each element is enclosed in angle brackets(e.g..<h1>,,) that specify its type and purpose.

HTML is a simple yet powerful language that defines the content's structure without worrying about its appearance. It acts as the foundation, allowing developers to integrate styles using CSS (Cascading Style Sheets) and interactivity with JavaScript. As a result, HTML plays a crucial role in building websites, making it possible to create user-friendly and accessible content for a wide audience across various devices and platforms.

CSS (Cascading Style Sheets) is a style sheet language used to describe the presentation of a web page written in HTML. It controls the look and feel of a website by defining the styles for various HTML elements, such as colors, fonts, layouts, spacing, and animations. CSS separates content from design, allowing developers to create visually appealing web pages while keeping the HTML structure clean and focused on content. CSS uses selectors and properties to apply styles. Selectors (e.g., `.class`, `#id`, or `element`) target specific HTML elements, while properties (e.g., `color`, `font-size`, `margin`) define the desired style. One of the key features of CSS is its ability to create responsive designs, adapting the layout to different screen sizes and devices using media queries. By utilizing CSS, developers can enhance the user experience, ensure visual consistency across the website, and bring the design vision to life.

JAVA SCRIPT is a versatile programming language that adds interactivity, logic, and dynamic features to web pages. Unlike HTML and CSS, which define the structure and style of a webpage, JavaScript brings it to life by enabling real-time updates, form validation, animations, and interactive content. It is a client-side language, meaning it runs directly in the user's browser, enhancing the responsiveness and user experience of the website without needing a page reload. JavaScript can manipulate HTML elements and CSS styles through the Document Object Model (DOM), allowing developers to create features like image sliders, dynamic forms, and responsive navigation menus. It supports modern development techniques like asynchronous programming with promises and fetch API for data retrieval, making it a fundamental part of building interactive, data-driven web applications. JavaScript's popularity is bolstered by extensive frameworks and libraries (e.g., React, Angular, Vue.js), making it a core technology for front-end web development.
